

Decisioneering Named One of Denver Area's Best Places to Work

Denver, November 17, 2006 -- Employees at Decisioneering®, Inc., have yet another reason to smile - their company was named one of Denver's best places to work. Decisioneering, an innovator of software and services for risk analysis and optimization, was honored by the Denver Business Journal as one of the Best Places to Work in the Denver area.

Decisioneering came in sixth place in the "medium company" category (51-150 employees). This year more than 160 companies were nominated for the award and only 30 recognized.

"We are delighted with this recognition," said Jim Franklin, CEO of Decisioneering. "This award is one of the most important ones we have received, because we are being judged not by outsiders, but by our own employees. I would like to thank and congratulate each and every one of them."

Decisioneering offers its employees an array of employee benefits. Benefits include health, dental, vision and life insurance, a flexible benefits "cafeteria" plan, ECO Pass, eleven company paid holidays, three weeks of paid time off and participation in the 401(k) retirement plan, which currently has a paid 4% match with immediate vesting. In addition, Decisioneering encourages its employees to balance their careers with interests outside of work, including family, volunteerism and recreational activities.

Decisioneering values the ethics and morals of its employees. These values along with passion and ambition dictate who the company hires and retains. The recognition by the Denver Business Journal is one more accolade for the company. In 2006, the company was awarded the Technology Service of the Year and named as one of the 50 fastest growing technology companies in Colorado for the ninth straight year.

This is the fourth year the Denver Business Journal has awarded Denver's finest companies as determined by the people that know it best: its employees. Winners were selected based on employee measurement of 40 attributes known to drive employee engagement.
